This guide shows you everything you need to know to work with Photoshop Elements 10. If you are looking for a complete tutorial on the whole of Photoshop Elements then read our on-line tutorial. The guide assumes you have used an image editor before and understand that the Save As / Save As JPG option can produce files with completely different compression (JPEG) settings. Fig. 1: The mouse icon used to navigate Photoshop Elements 10. Step 1 Open Photoshop Elements 10 from the desktop. Step 2 Click on the menu Icon to access Photoshop Elements 10 and then select Edit from the menu. The folder containing the images you wish to work with will now be displayed in the window. Fig. 2: The window used to access the images and other files you wish to edit. Step 3 Click on the All Pictures folder. The contents of the All Pictures folder will be displayed in the window. This window contains all of the images you have saved to the computer. Fig. 3: The window used to access all the images. Step 4 Press the Import button. A window will appear and you can select the images you wish to import into the All Pictures folder. Fig. 4: The window used to select the images you wish to import. Step 5 You can now scroll up and down through the images in the window or use the green plus (+) and red minus (-) icons to select all of the images in the folder. Note that you cannot normally select multiple photos at a time. Step 6 The images will appear in the main window. Step 7 Double-click on the image you wish to start editing. Fig. 5: Double-clicking on an image. Step 8 A new blank Photoshop Elements window will open. You can use the tools in the window to modify the image. Fig. 6: The Tools Window. Step 9 If you wish to, you can now use the Save As / Save As JPG button to save the image again but this time using a different quality setting. Fig. 7: The Save As / Save As JPG button. Step 10 You can preview how the image will look at the higher quality setting with the View Original button at the top of the window. You can also modify the image by using the tools in the window. and assumes the function of separating the head-on binary pair. Numerical simulations confirmed this prediction. In addition, we also present the correspondence of the model with the generalizations of the Hénon map and the Chen map, for example, the Chen map with $\alpha \in \mathbb{R}$ and $\beta = 0$ in [eq_ch_map] , the Hénon map with $\gamma_1 = 0$ and $\gamma_2 = 0$ in [eq_he_map] and the pure quartic map with $\gamma_3 = 0$ and $\gamma_4 = 0$ in [eq_quartic_map] , see figure [fig_diagram] . In figure $\text{[fig_adiab_comparison]}$, we present the phase portrait of all the maps for $I = -0.4$ and $R = 0.4$. It is easy to see the difference of the phase portraits for these maps. Especially, these maps do not have the symmetry $(x, y) \rightarrow (r^2, -r)$ as the Hénon map do, which corresponds to the exchange of the eccentricity for the inner orbit. $\text{[Phase portraits of the adiabatic configuration model for } I=-0.4 \text{ and } R=0.4 \text{ and the three generalizations of the Hénon map. The recent poll, which involved 1004 respondents aged under 25 years in the UK, suggests that 58 per cent of young adults think it is acceptable for older people to live in homes filled with junk. The study of the habits of young adults, called Flashman, was commissioned by research firm eMarketer to mark World Older Persons' Day on Monday 13 November. According to the poll, which asked users to state their view on acceptance of junk in the homes of older people: 58 per cent of young adults think it is acceptable for older people to live in homes filled with junk 83 per cent of young adults are inspired by people over 60 Two thirds of respondents would likely buy furniture and housewares from the likes of Ikea and Habitat as a gift for their grandparents 60 per cent would like their grandparents to live with them in their home The research also claims that more than 60 per cent of young adults in the UK are inspired by people over 60, which is up from 52 per cent in 2011. The most inspirational person was considered to be Queen Elizabeth II, who is reported to be a 'great role model for older people'. The world's oldest person is 116-year-old Misao Okawa, who celebrated her 117th birthday in September, according to the Guinness Book of World Records. Juanita Stamper, UK director of eMarketer, said: "Older people have played a big role in shaping our society. They have been responsible for many inventions and innovations, and remain at the forefront of many aspects of life, such as thinking about how the world will change in the future. "There is a key role for older people in the workplace too, as they have the ability to provide mentoring, inspiration and guidance, which younger people can't afford to do." World Older People's Day is held annually on 13 November and the research suggests that it is more than a chance to make the most of the festive period.El Ave El Sol El Ave El Sol is a free weekly newspaper in Guadalajara, Jalisco, Mexico.
